LAW SCHOOL

OF THE

CINCINNATI COLLEGE.

This school was founded in May, 1833, by lawyers who had received their instruction in the Law School of Reeve & Gould, at Litchfield, or in the Dane Law School, at Cambridge, and who sought to introduce the advantages of that method of the study of the law into the West. It is understood to be the first Law School established west of the Allegheny Mountains. The first term began on the 7th of October, 1833.

In the year 1835 the Law School was incorporated with the Cincinnati College, a literary and academic institution founded in the year 1819; and from that time it has been conducted under the name of the "Law School of the Cincinnati College." As such it became permanently located in the College Buildings on Walnut Street, in Cincinnati, and has been liberally endowed from the College funds for the establishment of professorships, and for the formation of a law library adequate for the purposes of the School.

Professor Rufus King, who died on the 25th of March, 1891, after a long connection with the School, had a hereditary interest in it, for his father, Edward King, was one of its founders. This interest Rufus King manifested not only by his earnest and able work as Professor and as Dean, but he has provided in his will for the future endowment of the Chair of Constitutional Law.

SESSIONS AND VACATIONS.

The regular Course of Study occupies a period of three academic years, including three terms of eight months each, and a vacation of four months between the terms. There are two sessions in each term: one before and one after the Christmas holidays. The first session commences on the first Wednesday in October and closes with the Christmas holidays. The second session commences at the beginning of January, and closes on the last Wednesday in May. The Christmas vacation includes both Christmas and New Year's days, and is the only interruption in the continuity of the two sessions, except a day at the November elections.

ADMISSIONS.

Applicants for admission may register their names and pay their tuition fees to the Dean of the Faculty, at the library of the School, on the three days next before the commencement of the first session of each term.

Applicants are admitted to the Junior Class upon satisfactory evidence of such advancement in ordinary academic education as will fit them to profit by the studies in the Law School; but no formal examination is required.

Applicants are admitted to the higher classes upon a satisfactory examination in the course prescribed for the lower ones. In addition to such examination, and as a necessary condition of entering the higher classes, the applicant must have completed the full Course of Study for the lower ones at this School, or must present the diploma of another Law School, or a certificate of attendance for the requisite time at such School, or a certificate of an attorney at law in good standing, showing that the applicant had diligently studied law under his direction for one or two years previous, as the case may be.

The regular examinations for admission occur at the beginning of the first session of the term.

Applicants for a degree must register their names for the Senior Class with the Dean within the first two weeks of the term, and be in daily attendance thereafter. Students may enter the Senior Class subsequently, but will not be graduated.

Special students, not candidates for a degree, may be admitted to any of the exercises of the School without examination, in the discretion of the Faculty.

COURSE OF STUDY.

The School is divided into three Classes, Junior, Middle and Senior, for each of which a special course of study is provided.

The daily exercises consist of lectures and recitations from standard text-books. Leading cases and collateral authorities on the subjects under consideration, are referred to by the Professor; and, at the succeeding recitation, the class will be examined upon cases and authorities thus cited as well as upon the subject-matter of the lesson. At each exercise, hypothetical cases are put to the students, as a means of developing the faculty of making a practical application of legal principles. Students are encouraged to put questions freely to the instructor at all recitations. The intention is to assign work enough, daily, to require the diligent use of the student's time, and to make the lectures and quizzes elucidate the subject in hand and test the thoroughness of the work of the class.

At the close of the second session, a course of study to be pursued during the summer vacation will be prescribed for each class.

Those who desire to take a special course can do so, and the tuition fees will vary in proportion to the amount of instruction given.

The regular course of instruction is as follows:

Junior Year.—Elementary Law, Gov. Cox. This course will include not only the general elements, but the development of the principles upon which each department of the existing law rests. It is thus made the necessary introduction to each topic taken up in the later courses. The basis is laid for the further study of rights, wrongs and remedies, whether regarding the person or property, and as to property both real and personal. Special lectures are interspersed, upon the History of the Law, the relation of the English Common Law to American Law, the relation of the Feudal System to the existing law of real property, the rise and the general province of Equity Jurisprudence, etc. In the last half of the Junior year Prof. Morrill will devote two hours per week to the subject of Contracts. It is confidently believed that the whole course of the Junior year will be found so important that no student would willingly omit it. The Text-Books are Blackstone's Commentaries, Kent's Commentaries, Anson on Contracts, Williams on Real Property.

Middle Year.—Evidence, Judge Peck; Text-Book, Greenleaf on Evidence: Estoppel, Judge Peck; Lectures, with Bigelow on Estoppel as a book of reference: Crimes, Judge Sage; Text-Book, May's Criminal Law, with Russell on Crimes and Wilson's Ohio Criminal Law for reference: Equity Jurisprudence, Judge Sage; Topics: Discovery, Fraud, Accoun and Partition, Partnership Bills; Text-Book, Bispham's Principles of Equity, with Adams' Principles of Equity and Pomeroy's Equity Jurisprudence for reference: The Study of Cases, Judge Sage; Text-Book, Wambaugh's Study of Cases: Torts, Prof. Morrill; Text-Book, Bigelow on Torts, with Bigelow's Leading Cases in Torts and Webb's Pollock

DEGREES.

The Degree of Bachelor of Laws will be conferred by the Corporation upon all students who have been regularly admitted to the Senior Class, have attended the full course of Senior Lectures, and shall have passed the examination required for graduation. This examination is both oral and written, and is conducted by a Committee appointed by the Supreme Court of Ohio. No student will be admitted to such examination, the number of whose unexcused absence is twenty per cent of the whole number of lectures during the Senior Year, or whose conduct shall have been otherwise exceptionable.

The degrees are conferred on the last day of the term, and graduates must attend in person to receive them.

Graduates having the necessary qualifications of age and citizenship are admitted to the Bar of Ohio without further examination.

MOOT COURTS.

Moot Courts are held each week during the year, commencing the first Thursday in November. These are presided over by the Professors in turn, and members of the Senior and Middle Classes are appointed to act as counsels and as associate judges.

At each of the Moot Courts, short but carefully prepared essays on topics previously assigned are required to be read.

The Courts over which the Dean presides are devoted exclusively to Exercises in Pleadings.

Attendance is compulsory upon the Senior and Middle year students, but is optional with the Juniors.

Moot Clubs, limited in membership, are also formed among the students for voluntary exercises in Pleadings, Practice and Argument.

LIBRARY.

The School has a Library of nearly six thousand volumes, comprising the works of the best writers on Law and Jurisprudence, and the more important reports. It has been selected with special reference to the wants of the School, and is devoted to its exclusive use. Large additions are annually made, a yearly appropriation of $1,000 for that purpose being provided by the Corporation. The Library is opened to the students daily from 9 o'clock A. M. to 10 o'clock P. M., and is under the control of the Librarian and his Assistant

Students who are non-residents have, by the courtesy of the Directors of the Public Library of Cincinnati, the use of the Library, and are admitted to the Reading Rooms without charge.

Very valuable advantages are thus opened to those who have time for pursuing any branch of literary or scientific culture in connection with the study of the law.

PRIZES.

ESTABLISHED IN 1877.

JULIUS DEXTER, ESQ., one of the Trustees of the College, provided funds, in 1877, amounting to $250 per annum, for prizes to be awarded to the Graduating Class at the close of the year.

The annual provision for the prizes was continued by Mr. Dexter till 1881, when the temporary arrangement made by him was assumed by the Board of Trustees of the Cincinnati College, who now make the appropriation for the purpose.

The awards to the Senior Class are made by the Examining Committee of the Bar appointed by the Supreme Court.

To the Senior Class: A prize of seventy-five dollars is awarded for the best examination: a prize of seventy-five dollars for the best essay on a subject to be designated; a prize of fifty dollars for the second-best examination; a prize of fifty dollars for the best performance in a public forensic discussion.

To the Middle and Junior Classes: A prize of seventy-five dollars for the best examination; a prize of fifty dollars for the second-best examination.

ADVISORY.

As a general answer to numerous inquiries, the Faculty would make the following suggestions:

They earnestly advise and recommend the pursuing of academic studies, as far as possible, before beginning a professional course.

They believe that the time occupied in a college course of study, if diligently used, will, in the end, be saved by the more rapid advancement of the young lawyer in his profession. Apart, therefore, from the motive to be drawn from the general benefits of a liberal education, they give their full influence in favor of the most thorough preparation for professional study.

But as all cannot command the means and time for this, no rule is established in regard to the amount of education required for entering the Junior year, beyond what is generally understood by the elements of a good English education.

The chief advantages of attending a law school, instead of reading in a practicing lawyer's office, are found in the regular recitations in class, where the presence of numerous fellow-students stimulates the desire to be well prepared for the daily examinations; in the regular and full development and illustration of the topic in hand by the lectures of the professors; in the practical application of what is learned by the exercises of the moot courts; and in the comparison of one's powers with others in a way which shows where improvement is most necessary, or gives reasonable confidence in the student's ability to cope with those he must meet in the arena of professional labor.

Very few lawyers in active practice can afford the time or labor necessary for the thorough instruction or examination of a student in the office, and experience shows that all that is commonly done is to give advice as to text-books, some general supervision of study, with occasional brief examinations, and the opportunity to the student to become familiar with the ordinary current of business.

If a part of such experience could be supplemented by the full course of lectures in the Law School, the best results would no doubt be obtained; and as the course of study in this School is framed with a view to unity and a proper relation of parts, we can not too strongly urge the advisability of attending the Junior and Middle as well as the Senior lecture terms.

The Supreme Court of Ohio, under recent legislation, is enforcing rules which must have the good effect of raising the standard of qualification for the Bar in this State; and a similar tendency throughout the country is making the necessity for careful and systematic training more and more evident. The value of the diploma and degree granted by a reputable school is, therefore, becoming more apparent as evidence of the sound preliminary education which is the best commendation to the public as well as to the members of the profession.

☞ Communications concerning the Law School should be addressed to JACOB D. COX, Dean, College Building, Cincinnati, Ohio.

The Lecture-room and Library are in the Cincinnati College Building, Walnut Street, between Fourth and Fifth Streets.
